

Production of lumber and its related activity is important source of employment and income in Wasatch-Summit areas large aspen trees in the Intermountain Region. Demand for aspen wood products is increasing steadily, posing a potential new industry for the area. An almost unlimited supply of aspen is at hand.

Expansion of timber production on the Heber Ranger District is expected to provide increasing numbers of jobs for area residents and the 25 per cent of forest receipts returned to local communities for schools and roads is of growing importance. Easy access to source of supply, availability of good rail and motor transportation and good labor supply all are favorable conditions present for developing the Heber area forest products industry.
